LCR Spotlight on Janet L. Clark

Kitwana McTyer
President & CEO

A Local Church Representative, or LCR, is someone who is the primary point of contact between Residing Hope and a church congregation. The LCR receives information that they disseminate to the congregants, keeping the church informed of how their support is impacting young lives as well as other ways they can become engaged. The LCR coordinates special drives like Christmas gifts, as well as special events to benefit the children at Residing Hope. The role of LCR is very important, and can have a tremendous impact on our ministry. Janet Clark of Saint Paul's United Methodist Church in Tallahassee, started her LCR journey forty-six years ago and is still going strong. We recently spoke to Janet about her journey over the years.

Christ United Methodist Church in Lakeland was my first LCR experience starting in 1980. However, my history with the Florida United Methodist Children's Home (now known as Residing Hope) began many years earlier. My father shared stories with me about growing up in Enterprise between 1929 and 1935 when he was 8-13 years of age. His father, my grandfather, was Rev. Robert Caldwell, minister of the Barnett Memorial Methodist Church on the edge of Residing Hope's Enterprise campus. All of the children in the community attended Sunday school and worship at his church. My father had many friends from Residing Hope, some who lasted a lifetime. Rev. Caldwell later served on the Board of Trustees for the Children's Home. My father, a Lt. Commander (Retired) served in the Navy with some of those same children after they grew up. My father also served on the Board of Trustees from 1984 to 1993. As a family, we always attended the Day on Campus events, now known as Day of Hope.

I continued as the LCR for Christ UMC through 2006. During that time, I promoted the Fifth Sunday through the inserts and posters provided by Residing Hope, and by speaking during services. At Christmas we would have an Angel tree with requests from the children, and delivering the gifts to campus. We took a van or chartered bus for the Day on Campus events (now Day of Hope). I devised a trivia game about Residing Hope to play on the trips, and candy was the usual prize.

In June of 2006, I moved to Tallahassee and joined Saint Paul's UMC. It was chartered in 1952 as a seed church of Trinity UMC downtown, and had been a supporter of the Children's Home for some time. When the LCR at Saint Paul's retired a few years later, I gladly accepted the position. Each month we scheduled a Mission Moment during worship to share our information. I always talked about the mission and vision of Residing Hope, updates and activities, and include a video highlighting one of the children. I also wrote articles in the bimonthly Epistle and include notes in weekly emails to the congregation. For Fifth Sundays, I mounted the poster on an easel in the Narthex and distribute the inserts. My real joy on a Fifth Sunday has always been watching the children in the video from Residing Hope.

One of the more fun collections at Saint Paul's was the Noisy Change. During the children's message there was a video and children raced up and down the aisles, from choir to balcony, collecting change and bills in a tiny bucket. Finally, they returned to the front, shaking the little buckets along the way, and dump the contents into a single, larger bucket for the Minister to pray over.

Noisy Change Collection

Alternative Christmas market

Every November at Saint Paul's, we hold an Alternative Christmas Market where each mission sets up a table. Then, church members and friends come through and visit. It gives me an opportunity to talk about Residing Hope, collect Christmas gift cards for the children, as well as donations to purchase additional gift cards. It's a great fundraising opportunity, and my Sunday school class supports the gift card drive as well.

Residing Hope has blessed so many children and families since 1908. It has never closed its doors, only continued to grow and expand its services. All those children are our future. The children there will become the workforce and citizens of tomorrow along with our own children. I'm just happy to be a part of it.

Thanks to Alan Reynor for providing the pictures.

A Word from Operations

Chief Operations Officer

What a difference a year makes! At this time in 2025, Residing Hope was being informed by Volusia County Schools that its contract with the district for Legacy Scholars Academy (LSA) was being cancelled due to budgetary constraints. Instead of letting the unfortunate development get the best of us, our Education Team immediately sprung into action and developed a plan to serve the academic needs of youth that focused on both the short and long term.

As we assessed the situation, our Education Team developed and implemented a multi-pronged plan that was designed to best serve the individual needs of our youth. Some youth went to traditional public school while others were better served by working with our Education Department staff through online coursework. Throughout the 2025-2026 school year, we closely monitored the progress and well being of our students. What we learned was that the vast majority of our youth were struggling in a traditional school setting without the built in supports of our Legacy Scholars Academy. Supports such as the use of Social Emotional Learning (SEL) and its corresponding tools of Recognize, Understand, Label, Express, and Regulate (RULER) that help our students navigate the school day and help keep behaviors and the emotional ups and downs our students face from interfering in the learning process.

Before the year was even half over, we realized, and the powers to be met and concurred, that the educational needs of our youth would be better served through an on campus private school. And with that, we began our journey to create a school that would holistically serve our youth. The school will also create an environment that is inviting and conducive to learning at their own pace. An environment where successes are celebrated and failures are momentary challenges to be overcome. As our journey progressed there was much to learn and do when it comes to starting a school. Fortunately, we had the foundation of LSA in place from which to build upon. We worked with our community partners such as case management to let them know about the new LSA and to begin the process of setting up scholarships for students who would be attending school on campus in the fall. Our Education Department leaned into its already strong relationship with the Residing Hope Development Department to raise funds for starting and operating LSA. We needed updated equipment, curriculum materials, and financial resources from which to pay our teachers and staff.

When Legacy Scholars Academy opens in August for the 2026 – 2027 school year, we will have three classrooms, each with a full time teacher and paraprofessional. Our existing Education Team will provide support and leadership to the education staff and students. We have built into our education plan enough instructional staff to ensure that each student will receive the individual attention and support they need to be academically and socially successful. One of the most important components of the school day in previous years was a class devoted specifically to teaching our students the components and practices of social emotional learning and how mastering those skills will assist them in all aspects of their educational experience.

We are excited for what the next chapter of Legacy Scholars Academy will bring for our youth. In the meantime, much work still lies ahead to make this dream a reality.

If you are interested in learning more about supporting our children's education through Legacy Scholars Academy, please contact Elisabeth Gadd, Chief Development Officer at 386.801.2362 or Elisabeth.Gadd@ResidingHope.org.

McKenzie's Story

McKenzie knows what it's like to have a rough life. She had been through seven different placements before she was ten years old. She came into care at Residing Hope because of behavioral issues. McKenzie was being extremely disrespectful to her foster parents and throwing tantrums at home and school. She was unable to cope with the impact of the trauma she had suffered over the years, and blamed herself. McKenzie's foster parents were unable to help her. That's when they turned to Residing Hope.

When McKenzie arrived at our Enterprise campus, her therapist helped her to understand that the trauma she had experienced was not her fault. The therapist then worked with McKenzie to help her learn critical coping skills for her to deal with her feelings. As her therapy progressed, McKenzie became more outgoing. The tantrums and disrespectful behavior soon disappeared. She also became more active in our Spiritual Life program, which really made a difference in her progress.

Our Spiritual Life program is an essential part of the holistic care provided at Residing Hope. Children and youth are given the opportunity to explore their relationship with God through a variety of weekly activities such as Sunday services and weekday youth groups. According to McKenzie, "The Spiritual Life program means a lot because I get to bond with God. It also helps me to see that God is with me, even when I'm having a hard time."

The Spiritual Life program also introduces our residents to the performing arts with opportunities to perform in seasonal plays, take lessons with musical instruments, and perform in the youth band or choir. McKenzie was very excited when she started taking drum lessons, and has begun playing with the youth band during Sunday services.

Your continued support has helped McKenzie, as well as other children, learn to cope with their past trauma. They feel safe and loved, and they find hope in a promising future.

What is a Qualified Charitable Distribution?

And how can it help me?

A Qualified Charitable Distribution, or QCD, allows individuals who are 70 ½ years old or older to donate up to $111,000 in 2026 (indexed annually for inflation) total to one or more charities directly from a taxable IRA instead of taking their required minimum distributions (RMDs). QCDs are a fantastic way to satisfy RMD requirements. And, for married couples who have separate IRAs, this is a fantastic way to double the giving. The results are that donors may be able to avoid being pushed into higher income tax brackets. However, there are some limitations.

How do qualified charitable distributions work?

To understand Qualified Charitable Distributions, you must first understand required minimum distributions (RMDs). While you can begin making Qualified Charitable Distributions at 70 ½, they become even more attractive at age 73 (or later, depending on age) when RMDs kick in on IRAs. This annual distribution increases the IRA holder's total taxable income.

This income increase could potentially push the taxpayer into a higher tax bracket. It can even trigger high taxes on Social Security income.

Because QCDs reduce the balance of the IRA, they may reduce the required minimum distributions in future years. QCDs are also not counted toward the maximum amounts deductible for those who itemize their giving on their tax returns – the $111,000 can be above and beyond those limits. For these reasons, a QCD can potentially enable a donor to give a bigger charitable gift than they could if they just donated cash or other assets. Another benefit for those who donate through QCDs is the benefit of bypassing itemization for those gifts. These gifts also bypass the new 0.5% AGI floor and 35% cap which can reduce the effectiveness of itemized charitable gifts.

How are QCDs made?

Qualified Charitable Distributions are made directly to the eligible charity, like Residing Hope, from a traditional IRA, inherited IRA, inactive Simplified Employee Pension (SEP) plan and inactive Savings Incentive Match Plan for Employees (SIMPLE) IRAs. (Inactive SEP and SIMPLE IRAs are accounts that no longer receive employer contributions.)

The money is a direct transfer to the charity that never passes through the hands of the IRA holder. Instead, the IRA custodian can either send an electronic transfer of funds or a check directly to the charity.

For a QCD to count toward your minimum annual IRA distribution, it must be made by the same deadline as a normal distribution, which is usually December 31st of the tax year.

Who can make a qualified charitable distribution?

An individual donor can contribute up to $111,000 per year in QCDs, as long as that individual is 70 ½ years old or older. For married couples, each spouse can make QCDs from their individual accounts up to the $111,000 limit for a potential total of $222,000.

The $111,000 per person limit applies to the sum of all QCDs taken from all IRAs in a year. A donor can make one large contribution or several smaller contributions over the course of the calendar year. Remember that QCDs can be made from one or more IRA type.

A QCD can potentially enable a donor to give a bigger charitable gift than they could if they just donated cash or other assets.

What type of charity can receive a QCD?

Qualified Charitable Distributions can only be made to certain qualified charitable organizations, as defined in the tax code.

Currently, QCDs cannot be made to donor-advised fund sponsors, private foundations and supporting organizations, although they may be categorized as charities. Before making a gift, the donor should ensure the organization is qualified to accept QCDs. Residing Hope is qualified to accept QCDs.

There are tax limitations that should be noted. A donor can make a Qualified Charitable Distribution that exceeds the individual's required minimum distribution for a given year. However, that extra distribution can't be carried over – i.e., used to meet the minimum distributions for future years. This contrasts with other strategies, such as a donation of cash and appreciated securities, where a large donation can be made in one year and the tax benefits can be carried forward. It also differs from contributions to a donor-advised fund or foundation, which can also allow you to front-load giving in a high-income year and use those funds to support charities in the future.

Does a QCD make sense for me?

A QCD can provide several potential benefits. It may be a suitable strategy for donors who:

- Are required to take a minimum distribution from an IRA, but don't need the funds and would face increased tax liabilities if they took the distribution as income.
- Would like to reduce the balance in an IRA to lower future RMDs.
- Would like to make a larger charitable gift than they could if they simply donated cash or other assets.
- Do not wish to make their contribution to a foundation or donor-advised fund.
- Have identified which charities they want to support immediately with a substantial gift.

While this article did not explicitly discus the One Big Beautiful Bill (OBBB) which was passed this year, it does in effect incentivize QCD giving. It also offers a cleaner, more tax efficient way to give while realizing philanthropic goals.

One last thought; for those interested, there is a ONE TIME opportunity to take an RMD distribution and use funds to create a Charitable Gift Annuity ($50,000 limit) or a Charitable Remainder Trust (CRT). The CRT must be a newly established fund, not added to an existing one. For more information, please reach out to me to discuss.
